

STARTING YOUNG: Four-year-old twins Seven and Piper Kostrin get involved. — Picture by Stephen Wark

Pre-school takes on green look

By HAYLEY ODGERS

IRRAWANG Pre-school hopes to do its bit for the Earth.

Teacher Sue McDonnell has enrolled the pre-school's two classes in a fundraiser which will see children aged between three and five learn about caring for the environment.

This will be done by the students planting wattle and gum tree seeds and nourishing them to seedlings when the trees will be planted into a prepared site at pre-school.

Each student will be encouraged to seek sponsorship for their part in the project and some of the money raised will go back into the pre-school.

Some will be returned to the Green-Up Clean-Up initiative in order to spread the program.

"It's teaching them they can do something for the environment," Ms McDonnell said.

The students will also be required to keep the site clean.